

APPENDIX 2: RECREATION COMPATIBILITY

The two following tables were developed with input from the Statewide Stakeholder Team to identify general levels of compatibility between people engaged in different recreation activities. The first table shows activities that occur in upland settings during warm weather conditions (non-winter); the second shows winter and water-based activities. The compatibility determinations listed in the tables were developed based on the knowledge and experience of team members and their understanding of their constituent' perspectives.

The intent of developing the tables is to identify potential opportunities to combine recreation activities and, conversely, where separating activities in space or time may be necessary to ensure satisfying experiences for all participants. The levels of compatibility are defined as follows:

- High: (green) Participants pursuing the activity are not adversely affected by people engaged in the other activity. There may be some temporary inconvenience, but no impact of any significance.
- Medium: (yellow) Participants pursuing the activity are affected by people engaged in the other activity to a degree that is noticeable or distracting, but does not prevent the participant from being able to engage in the activity.
- Low: (orange) Participants pursuing the activity are affected by people engaged in the other activity to a degree that it substantively alters the participant's ability to successfully engage in the activity.
